

One example of a test for this GUI would be a test which checks to see whether or not a new window is opened when this button is pressed. A more in-depth test could check whether or not the correct window is opened by comparing the contents of the new window to what is expected.

Another test can test out the functionality of the user ratings window. The test should assert that a new window opens when a show with stored ratings data is clicked. It should also check that the show ID is the same in the QListWidget as it is in the new ratings data window.

